Resident Letter

This morning, while organizing some drawers, I came across two letters which were hand written and a post mark on each envelope with the date of 1983. The letters were addressed to my home in Winchester Country and were from my two aunts who are now deceased. I read each letter carefully and with love. It was so good to hold their letters in my hands and to see their handwriting and to remember the times about which they were writing.

I suddenly wondered, with our new and "much better than snail mail" email communications, if anyone would ever save one of my emails and refer to it in twenty years. We might be missing something special.

Winchester Country Seniors Group News

The Winchester Country Seniors Group met on November 28, 2005 at the clubhouse for a complimentary dinner catered by Outback Steakhouse. After our dinner and a talk from Jeff Mueller, President of the WCMA, we played bingo.

The next morning, many of our seniors group joined in with the Cy-Fair AARP Group, for a fun day trip to Moody Gardens in Galveston.

On Sunday, December 4th we ate at Pallota's on Jones Rd and then went to the Metropolitan Baptist Church's annual Christmas musical concert. The big band and huge chorus was outstanding. The whole multimedia performance was excellent.

On Friday, December 16th we met at Outback Steakhouse at 7070 Hwy 6 North for dinner and later saw "The Sound of Music" at Playhouse 1960.

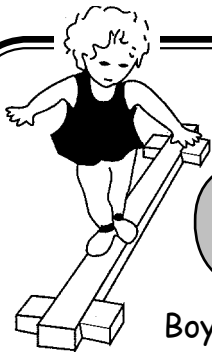

Because of the Christmas Holidays, we changed our December meeting to December 19th. We had our Christmas party, catered snack trays, and played the fun Rob Robin Gift Exchange.

Plan to be with us for an evening of fun and fellowship at our next meeting on Monday, January 23rd, 2006. We meet at the Winchester Country Clubhouse at 6:00 pm. See the Winchester Country newsletter for future meeting dates and times. Our normal meeting date and time is the fourth Monday of every month. Mark it on your calendar. For more information please call Lynn Field (Group Leader) at 281-894-9532.

Seasons of Maple

As the days shorten and winter approaches, maple trees drop their multicolored foliage and beckon a walk in the brisk air. After shuffling through piles of crisp, dying leaves, you may want to enjoy seasonal flavors such as maple syrup and maple sugar. Let's go beyond the traditional pancake and waffle topping and learn more about this indigenous product.

Did you know?

It takes about 40 years to grow a maple tree large enough to tap (minimum 10 inches in diameter). It takes about 40 gallons of sap to make 1 gallon of maple syrup.

Historical roots begin with Native Americans

Across the northeastern United States and eastern Canada, hard maple trees have provided rich sap for food, trade, gifts, and festivals since long before European settlers arrived. According to one legend, as frozen winter began to thaw into spring, an Iroquois chief took aim and expertly threw his tomahawk into a maple tree. The next morning, he noticed the sap beginning to flow from the gash in the tree. The tribe collected the sap and boiled it with meat for their meal. As the watery liquid began to boil away, an aromatic sweet syrup remained as a delicious discovery.

Another, more pragmatic theory is that Native Americans discovered the flavorful icicles of frozen maple sap ("sapsicles") that were created with the end-of-winter thaw. In the early 1600s Native Americans showed North American explorers their techniques for capturing the sap, and from there, an industry of maple syrup, maple sugar, and all things maple began.

Over the centuries, maple has become an important symbol of the history, people and culture of North Americans, and Canada officially adopted the maple leaf flag in the 1960s. Now, in the 21st century, we still enjoy the same kinds of maple treats that those early natives and settlers created.

Maple syrup contains nutrients

Pure maple syrup contains minerals such as calcium, potassium, manganese, magnesium, phosphorus, and iron. It also contains small amounts of vitamins, including riboflavin (B2), pantothenic acid (B5), pyridoxine (B6), niacin, B1, biotin, and folic acid.

The main type of sugar in pure maple syrup is sucrose. Like any sweet treat, enjoy maple recipes in moderation, and be sure to brush your teeth after eating.

Recipes

If your favorite recipes contain white sugar and you want to experiment with new flavors, use 3/4 cup maple syrup to replace 1 cup sugar. Also, for baked goods, be sure to reduce the amount of any other liquids; for example, if a bread recipe calls for 1 cup of sugar and 1 cup of milk, use 3/4 cup of maple syrup in place of the sugar, and remove 3 tablespoons of liquid from the cup of milk.

FARMERS

According to the Farmers' Almanac, the Full Sap Moon of March will announce the end of winter. The season will turn to spring, and the full moon will signal the time to begin tapping maple trees for another, flavorful harvest. In the meantime, you might want to try these recipes.

Maple-Teriyaki Glazed Salmon

1/2 cup tamari or low-sodium soy sauce
1/4 cup maple syrup
2 Tbs. apple cider vinegar or orange juice
2 Tbs. dry white wine
2 minced garlic cloves
1/2 inch piece of fresh ginger, peeled and minced (or 1/8 tsp. ground ginger) or to taste
4 salmon fillets

Mix together all ingredients except salmon. Pour just enough of the marinade to cover the bottom of an oven-proof baking dish. Place salmon in baking dish, and pour remaining marinade over it. Cover with foil and place in the refrigerator to marinate (30 minutes to 1 hour).

Preheat oven to 375F. Place baking dish in oven and bake 12 to 15 minutes or until salmon flakes easily with a fork. If necessary, spoon some of the marinade over the top of the fish while baking to form a glaze.

Maple Cranberry Sauce

1 cup water
1 cup brown sugar
1 (12 ounce) package fresh cranberries, rinsed
1 navel orange or 2 satsuma (seedless mandarin) oranges
1/4 cup maple syrup
1/2 tsp. ground nutmeg
1/2 tsp. cinnamon, or to taste

In a shallow pan over high heat, stir sugar into water and bring to a boil. Stir in cranberries and boil 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. (Cranberries may "pop.")

While cranberries are cooking, peel, section, and chop the orange. Optional: grate the orange peel before chopping for additional orange zest.

Reduce heat to low. Stir in remaining ingredients and simmer 5 minutes.

Remove from heat. Let cool slightly, and adjust maple syrup and spices to taste. Serve warm over roasted meat immediately, or chill in the refrigerator and serve as a side dish.
