A Focus on Backpack Safety Tips for Your family

By: Concentra Urgent Care

WEAR BOTH STRAPS

The use of one strap causes one side of the body to bear the weight of the backpack. By using two shoulder straps, the weight of the backpack is evenly distributed.

WEAR THE BACKPACK OVER THE STRONGEST MID-BACK MUSCLES

Pay close attention to the way the backpack is positioned on the back. It should rest evenly in the middle of the back. Shoulder straps should be adjusted to allow the child to put on and take off the backpack without difficulty and allow free movement of the arms. Straps should not be too loose, and the backpack should not extend below the low back.

LIGHTEN THE LOAD

Keep the load at 10%-15% or less of the child's body weight. Carry only those items that are required for the day. Organize the contents of the backpack by placing the heaviest items closest to the back. Some students have two sets of books, so as not to have to carry the heavy books to and from school.

PROPER BACKPACK USAGE

While a backpack is still one of the best ways to tote homework, an overloaded or improperly worn backpack gets a failing grade, according to the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA). Improper backpack use can cause injury, especially to children with young, growing muscles and joints.

Injury can occur when a child, in trying to adapt to a heavy load, uses harmful postures such as arching the back, leaning forward or, if only one strap is used, leaning to one side. According to physical therapists, these postural adaptations can cause spinal compression and/or improper alignment, and may hamper the proper functioning of the disks between the vertebrae that provide a shock absorption. A too-heavy load also causes muscles and soft tissues of the back to work harder, leading to strain and fatigue. This leaves the back more vulnerable to injury. A heavy load may also cause stress or compression to the shoulders and arms. When nerves are compressed, the child may experience tingling or numbness in the arms.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN A BACKPACK

Physical therapists recommend the following features when selecting a backpack:

- A padded back to reduce pressure on the back and prevent the pack's contents from digging into the child's back
- A waist belt to help distribute some of the load to the pelvis
- Compression straps on the sides or bottom of the backpack that, when tightened, compress the contents of the backpack and stabilize the articles
- Reflective material so that the child is visible to drivers at night

THE RESULTS

Worn correctly and not overloaded, a backpack is supported by some of the strongest muscles in the body: the back and abdominal muscles. These muscle groups work together to stabilize the trunk and hold the body in proper postural alignment.

HOW A PHYSICAL THERAPIST CAN HELP

A physical therapist can help you choose a proper backpack and fit it specifically to your child. Children come in all shapes and sizes, and some have physical limitations that require special adaptations. Additionally, a physical therapist can help improve posture problems, correct muscle imbalances, and treat pain that can result from improper backpack use. Physical therapists can also design individualized fitness programs to help children get strong and stay strong – and carry their own loads.

For more information on backpack safety, visit the American Physical Therapy Association at www.apta.org.

Houston Methodist West Hospital's Positively Pink to be held October 18, 2014

Houston Methodist West Hospital's second annual Positively Pink is scheduled for Saturday, October 18, 2014, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. The free, family-fun event is open to all members of the community.

One in eight women will be diagnosed with breast cancer during her lifetime, and a cancer diagnosis brings not only a health risk but often a financial burden as well. Positively Pink will increase awareness and provide education on breast cancer and raise funds to benefit local cancer patients with non-medical assistance where needed.

"We believe in this cause and are very excited about the information we'll be sharing at this year's Positively Pink," said Dr. Correna Terrell, radiologist and medical director of Houston Methodist's breast care center. "Improving the health of our community begins with education about reducing risk and discussing, at a personal level with women, why screening mammograms are important. We also want to inform our community about the comprehensive cancer resources, from prevention and screening to treatment and support, available here on campus." Attendees will have the opportunity to visit with the hospital's breast cancer physician team and other primary care physicians dedicated to women's health and sign up for their annual mammogram.

Last year, more than 400 community members attended and raised nearly $20,000 to establish Houston Methodist West's fund that provides much-needed assistance to West Houston and Katy residents affected by cancer. This year, many local vendors and sponsors have already signed up and event organizers are hoping for an even more successful event to maximize the amount of aid that can be given.

"It is great to see our community rally around such a great cause," said Kim Collins, director of cancer and breast care centers at Houston Methodist West. "We want taking action for your health and others to be engaging and Positively Pink will have something for everyone— live music by Steve Hawkins and the Shockwave Band, food and shopping, complementary health screenings and activities for kids—moonwalk, face painting, crafts and balloon artists." A silent auction will also be held, featuring items donated by local businesses including Clear Dermatology, Memorial Athletic Club, the Brookwood Community, Women's Health Boutique, Spaceman Closet, James Avery, the Houstonian Hotel & Spa and many others. For those interested in taking a little bit of pink home, pink flamingos will also be up for adoption.

For more information on Houston Methodist West's breast health program, Positively Pink 2014, or donating to the patient support fund, contact the Breast Care Center, at 832.522.1032.

INJURY PREVENTION IN YOUNG ATHLETES

*By Brett Neilson and Mike McTague
Doctors of Physical Therapy
Orthopedic Certified Specialists*

As another fall sports season approaches, a major goal of the coaches, trainers, and parents is keeping the athletes healthy and contributing to their respective sports. However, injury is inevitable and part of the game. Pediatric athletes present with a variety of injuries, the most common being the overuse type like Osgood-Schlatter disease and stress fractures. These injuries occur due to excessive stress placed on bone, muscle and tendon tissue that are constantly growing and not always at the same rate. Risk factors for these injuries include asymmetry in joint flexibility/mobility and muscle strength, impaired balance, training and recovery errors, and previous injury. There is potential for many overuse injuries to be prevented by knowing and following a few simple principles.

Pre-participation physical exams can be helpful for identifying many of the risk factors mentioned previously. It is recommended that these exams should include at minimum an assessment of joint mobility and flexibility and muscle strength and flexibility, as well as a thorough review of the past medical history to determine if the student is even appropriate for athletics. Recently, functional screening tools have been developed to reveal asymmetries and imbalances during basic movement patterns that are the foundation for many of the movements required during sport.

Training and conditioning play a major role in injury prevention as well. The term “cultural deconditioning” has been coined recently to describe the decrease in physical activity in our youth that has coincided with an increase in video game and computer use. So when the offseason ends and it’s time to get out and enjoy the 105 degree Texas heat, the body is not ready to stand up to the stresses suddenly placed on the body. A way to combat this is to promote an active, healthy lifestyle by putting down the Xbox controller and spending more time outside, taking part in offseason conditioning camps, or participating in local fitness classes.

A guideline known as the “10% rule” has also been developed to allow student athletes to transition back into sports activities. The idea is that the amount of training time, distance, repetitions, or load should not be increased by greater than 10% per week. For example, if a student is running 10 miles per week, they should not run more than 11 miles in the following week.

Knowing the signs and symptoms of overuse injuries is paramount. They are all too often written off as “growing pains” and are allowed to increase in severity, resulting in extensive time away from sport during the recovery process. Common signs and symptoms include pain that is persistent in nature, takes longer than usual to resolve, visible swelling, tenderness that can be localized to one area, and/or require interruption of normal athletic activities.

Finally, having an open-line of communication between the coaches, trainers, other health care professionals, parents, and athletes is imperative in injury prevention. Lack of or inconsistencies in the transfer of information between any of these parties can result in delayed access to proper prevention or treatment techniques and keep the athlete from performing at the highest possible level.
